Laboratory Procedures

Apararenone is supplied as a solid. A stock solution may be made by dissolving the apararenone in the solvent of choice, which should be purged with an inert gas. Apararenone is sparingly soluble (1-10 mg/ml) in DMSO.

Description

Apararenone is a non-steroidal mineralocorticoid receptor antagonist ($K_i = 0.104 \mu\text{M}$ for the human receptor).¹ It is selective for mineralocorticoid receptors over estrogen receptor α (ER α) and ER β and glucocorticoid, progesterone, and androgen receptors ($\text{IC}_{50}\text{s} = >100 \mu\text{M}$ for all). Apararenone increases the urinary ratio of sodium to potassium in adrenalectomized rats in a dose-dependent manner. It inhibits aldosterone- and nephrectomy-induced increases in systolic blood pressure and urinary albumin levels, as well as myocardial necrosis and fibrosis, cardiac arterial degeneration, and renal tubule damage, in a rat model of renal hypertension when administered at doses of 3 or 10 mg/kg per day.
